In 2008, making connections is easier than ever. With cell phones and high-speed internet, we can connect with people all over the world in an instant. We fill Facebook friend lists with hundreds of people who we might not have seen since third grade. However, even with connections coming at us from every direction, the most important connections are the ones we make face-to-face within our own community. It is impossible to stay isolated at a school like Butler. There are connections that are made for us - that crazy freshman year roommate, the classmates we wake up with at 8 am, the boss for an on-campus job. Then there are connections that we choose - the professors we learn from, the roommates we pick, the clubs we join oi the fraternities and sororities we pledge. Some connections are not as strong - someone holuing the door for you in Jordan or the stranger cheering next to you in the flawg Pourd.
Interactions come in many forms, some memorable and ethes.s jas theeting, but ultimately these connections shape our college experienr?

We Student Government Association puts on several events each year for Butler students. This year their activities included a trip to Chicago to see Boradway"s production of Wicked, a trip to Greensburg to go skydiving and a trip to go white water rafting. Each week SGA also plays a different movie on campus, and when the weather is nice they have "drive-in movies" projected on a large screen on the mall.
"I wanted to leave Butler knowing that both inside and outside of the classroom I had taken the plunge of stepping outside my comfort zone. That day, over 47 Butler students barreled out of the threshold at 10,000 feet up and learned that taking the jump--whether out of the plane, or into Butler University--will leave you excited and forever changed."

"Next year I will be traveling abroad to University of Auckland in Auckland, New Zealand for the fall semester! I then hope to receive an internship and take classes to complete my senior year.

My most valuable experience at Butler University has been my involvement in Scholars for the Advancement in Business Leadership. This organization coordinates a scholarship weekend for prospective business college students, for which I was the student coordinator. The people were driven, yet fun, and I learned a lot about my leadership style and the dynamics of working with people."
"Next year I am working at JP Morgan as an investment analyst in its Private Client Services group in Indy.

My most valuable college experience was taking the portfolio management class at Butler. Approximately 16 other students and I managed a portfolio of $$ 1$ million of Butler's Endowment. The class helped connect what I learned in the classroom with what I would be doing once I graduated."

Kevin Hitchen senior, finance
"Next year, I will be applying for dental school and working at the Indiana School of Dentistry doing research on fluoride content in teeth. Here at Butler, I will continue to lead as the president of the Butler Pre-Dental Society and the president of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars.
The most rewarding opportunity that I have had at Butler was being on the executive board for Alternative Spring Break. It was an excellent chance to work with Butler students and to see how much that people can grow from simply a week of service with reflection time afterwards."

junior, chemistry

The last semester of my senior year I studied abroad with the Global Adventures in the Liberal Arts program and traveled to Paris, London, Belfast, and the English Lake District. It was incredible. I have been involved in many things at Butler and loved every second of my time here, but I learned so much about myself during my study abroad experience. It was the perfect end to my undergraduate studies."

"Next year I am hoping to attend Indiana University School of Medicine. If that does not work out, then I will be getting a job with one of the research departments at medical school.

Being a part of the Greek system at Butler truly enriched my college experience. Through the Greek system, especially Delta Gamma, I have gained a better sense of myself and have developed incredible relationships. I came to understand my strengths as a leader, as well as the most important qualities of leadership through my experiences at Delta Gamma. Being President was not an easy task, but the personal development it allowed is irreplaceable."

My most valuable experiences were traveling to Quito, Ecuador my freshman summer and Xela, Guatemala last May, each for a week. I went to those places with the Timmy Foundation at Butler on medical service trips. These were some of the best moments of my life. For me, both of these trips confirmed that I was supposed to fullfill my life goal of becoming a doctor. One of my favorite memories from these trips was seeing a birth for the very first time and being able to help out. I will never forget these experiences ever and I can't wait untill get to go back."

Brian Clarke senior, accounting

"I have accepted a public accounting position with Crowe Chizek to work in their Oak Brook, Illinois office outside of Chicago after graduation.

My most valuable experience was the Johnson & Johnson Co-op offered through the College of Business. During the Fall Semester of my Junior Year I lived in New Brunswick, New Jersey and worked at Johnson & Johnson's Corporate Headquarters. This experience allowed me to apply the skills learned in my classes and put them into practical use working for a world renowned healthcare company such as J&J. The experience allowed me to benefit from both a business and personal perspective."
"Next year, my plans include spending the summer working in Uganda at an orphanage and school. Long-term plans (i.e., a job) are still unknown, but I would like to work in international peace relations.

Rebecca Scherpelz

Learning to appreciate that there are no strictly black and white solutions, I value those moments and experiences when people dared to question, challenge, learn, and grow. Whether this was through working as an RA, hearing the right jazz chords, traveling to Uganda, or talking with friends and professors, my four years at Butler have led me to value the beautiful differences in people that are ultimately unifying."

junior, journalism

"I will be Senior

 Class Vice President as well as Features Editor for Dawgnet. I also will be concentrating on writing my thesis and preparing for graduate school.My time at Butler has taught me the importance of small kindnesses in day to day life. This stems from the emphasis on volunteering and community involvement on campus, which has taught me more lessons than I can count. After studying abroad, I've learned that simply reaching out to another human being can make all the difference. Butler has offered me both a solid scholarly education and character foundation."

Susanna Foxworthy

"Next Year, I will attend Stanford University School of Medicine.

Serving impoverished communities of Latin America and Africa during medical service brigades has created memories and a passion that will never fade. I feel very blessed by the opportunities to lead and travel at Butler."
"Next year I will be continuing pharmacy school for my P2 year. I will serve as treasurer for Order of Omega and corresponding secretary for Delta Tau Delta.

My most valuable experience at Butler have to be the friendships and relationships made through both work, student organizations, and social life. These individuals have pushed me to be the best person I can be while being there when I needed a helping hand. I could not imagine what Butler would be like without those that have been with me along the way."

"This summer I will be interning with the US Department of Commerce. Next fall I will be a culture and language assistant in Spain for a year through the Spanish Department of Education. As of right now, I plan on pursuing a career with the government. Preferably in the foreign service. It is still up in the air.

My most valuable time at Butler has been my time spent studying abroad. I studied a semester in Milan, Italy, a semester in Madrid, Spain, two summer semesters in Lisbon, Portugal, and a summer semester in Brussels, Belgium. I probably learned the most about myself during my time spent abroad and learned a great deal about different people's culture and languages."

Matthew Fuss

"My plans for next year are to teach abroad through the Peace Corps or another volunteer organization.

My most valuable Butler experience was doing an independent study with one of my professors, Dr. Ena Shelley, about the Reggio Emilia Approach to education and then traveling to Reggio Emilia, Italy with Dr. Arthur Hochman, Dr. Judith Lysaker, and three other Butler students. These experiences allowed me to become immersed in and appreciate another culture's values, lifestyles, and education practices. Studying and traveling with professors and Butler students also helped me reflect on what I believe about education and my own lifestyle and values."

1. The drive-in movie is a familiar Welcome Week tradition, but this year the sophomore class took advantage of the new HRC pool to host a "Dive - In Movie." More than 70 students watched "Jaws" from the pool. 3. At the President's Dinner during Homecoming Week, sophomore Christina Lear and seniors Laura Michel and Forrest Heyman got the the chance to dance with President Bobby Fong.

2. English professor Marshall Gregory invited his Jane Austen seminar students over to his house for a Pride & Prejudice pizza party. The class, including senior Gabe Thayer, graduate student Sakina Alkhalifa, senior Michelle Zatulovsky, and juniors Amy Milton and Jon Garrison, watched the six hour mini-series after reading "Pride and Prejudice."

Matthew Tapp & politics

 was immediately interested in my internship with the Indiana Senate. My internship required fulfilling any roles requested by Senator Kenley. However, the most significant part of my work was sitting through committees and public testimonies, while working side-by-side with the man responsible for most of the legislation that is a prevalent issue to Indiana citizens' property tax.It has been very interesting to be able to have an inside look on the issues. It is very fascinating to hear all of these discussions and observe the process towards an equitable, uniform, and permanent property tax reform system.

This internship has given me a glimpse of what it's like to serve in state government, and has inspired me to move ahead with my career ambition to study law.
 event planning

icompleted my event planning internship with Internship and Career Services here at Butler. My responsibilities included: planning two department secretaries luncheons, helping plan A Night at the Columbia Club event (a networking opportunity for young alumni and students), planning the events of this summer's Brain Gain program, coordinating six focus groups for Internship and Career Services involving the Internship and Career Fairs currently offered, setting up, sending out and tracking surveys for the Internship and Career Prep Program and helping to plan this year's Internship and Career Services Field Day on April 22.

What I have enjoyed most about this internship is my freedom to be as creative as I want. I am able to work independently, but know that I have support around me in case I have questions, need a second opinion, or am facing an obstacle I am uncertain of how to handle. I am very excited that this internship has allowed me to discover an industry in which I thoroughly enjoy the work. My experiences here have also helped me better define my potential career path.

resume building

I have real world experience

Alicia Gillespie & non-profits

did an internship at both Make-A-Wish Foundation and Indy Hub Inc. At Make-A-Wish I took referrals from medical professionals and met with families to help them with paperwork. I also assisted the development team in event planning and creating original ideas for calendars, folders, and new specialized gifts for the children. At Indy Hub Inc. I was the Events and Media Manager. I helped promote and plan several events and managed the website. I also helped increase awareness of Indy Hub and the city of Indianapolis.

I am really interested in non-profit work personally and possibly professionally. Both internships allowed me to have hands-on involvement in things that interest me and not just one department. I really liked that I was given freedom to try new ideas and take the internship to the next level.

I think my most memorable moment at Make-A-Wish was when I helped put a Thomas the Train playhouse together for a little boy. I took two of my friends and we drove out to their farm house in northern Indiana. The playhouse was amazing and took several people and many hours to assemble. We spent the whole day with the family of seven and it will be a day I will always remember. At Indy Hub I was able to go to the Crystal Heart Awards. The best part was at the after party when I met Haley Joel Osment!

Laura Hazelton & publishing

y internship consisted of researching and fact-checking articles for the National Geographic magazine. I got to talk to the writers and photographers and talk to people all over the world. It was so surrea!!

I was most excited about the fact that I had read the magazines for years, and that I was able to actually work for a publication that I had so much respect for and enjoyed so much. Also, working in headquarters in Washington $D C$ was amazing. It was right in the middle of $D C$ and within walking distance of the White House. It was one of the best experiences I've had during my time at Butler!

My most memorable moment was when I was able to sit in on my first photo screening meeting, when all of the head editors and Chris Johns, the editor in chief, get together with the writer(5) and photographer(s) of an article and meet in this room that's equipped with a screen and low lights to go through all of the photographs and discuss how the story is going to be laid out. It was so intimidating to be in those meetings with 50 many incredibly talented people, but it was amazing at the same time to be able to take part in it.

Nate Harter & government

his summer I had the fantastic opportunity to intern with the Indiana Lt. Governor's Office. Specifically, I worked for the Office of Community and Rural Affairs (OCRA), which funds, establishes and develops programs that aid rural communities throughout Indiana. These programs help communities create their own visions of themselves, and then gives them the resources to make it happen. My jobs included filing, answering phones, creating spreadsheets, and traveling to these small communities alongside other OCRA employees. We tried to gather an idea of their needs, and then we would help them through the grant application process so that they could get the money for those things they needed.

Just as exciting were the conferences. Indiana is bursting at the seams with initiative regarding rural and community development. The leading movement is the Rural Indiana Strategy for Excellence by 2020, or RISE 2020, which is a statewide organization that helps communities network and plan to create wonderful places to live, work, and play. I also helped run a conference dealing with bringing broadband internet to rural homes and communities.

So far I have not mentioned my favorite part of the summer. I thoroughly enjoyed working in downtown Indianapolis, which teems with life and energy. Having been raised in one of those small, rural communities, I thoroughly enjoyed the bustle of the streets and the grandeur of the monuments and architecture. It was a rewarding summer, and I won't forget that Butler helped make it happen!

Jessica Largent & sports entertainment

y internship was with the Community Relations Department of Pacers Sports and Entertainment. I spent my time responding to both player and Larry Bird fan mail, facilitating autograph sessions, coordinating the High Five Book Exchange (a pre-game activity where 12 children ages 6-14 make a tunnel for the players to run through when they enter the court for warm up. The kids then sit on the bench for the entire warm-up and after the National Anthem each player shakes hands with one of the kids and gives him or her an autographed book). I also helped facilitate the weekly Reading Timeouts. This was when the community relations department, usually along with a mascot and maybe a player or pacemate, goes to an elementary school and reads to a group of students for an hour.

The thing that excites me most about this field is that every employee rallies together for a common cause of making the team and the organization a beneficial and enjoyable experience for fans.

I was around the team a lot during my internship, so they provided many memorable experiences. But my most memorable experience will be the reaction of one particular High Five participant after the completion of the pregame event. This was the child's first NBA game, and I had picked him at random to fill an opening in the group. He gave me the cutest and most sincere thank you that I have ever received, and I knew right then the meaning of a community relations department.

Our goal is to first and foremost make sure everyone is getting the real world experience in the Public Relations and Advertising business. Our other goal is working towards finalizing our Applied Arts Magazine competition that we are involved in currently, whether we place or not, this experience will help everyone out in the long run.

My most memorable experience has been the great trip we had last year to Washington DC for the American Advertising Association Conference. We learned a lot and it helped bring ideas to the table.

However, this year Butler's ethnic clubs produced numerous events to bring some diversity to the Butler bubble and give international students and students with mixed heritage a little taste of home.

Groups like ASIA and Sangam gave students a chance to eat the traditional foods of China and India. Latinos Unidos povided a night of music and dancing. While not pictured, the Black Student Union displayed the latest in Greek fashions, and the German Club gave an outlet for stress during final week in spring. The Order of Omega is a national Greek Leadership Honor Society. The Nu Upsilon Chapter was started at Butler in 1995 and contains over fifty students recognized for their outstanding scholarship.

This year's largest events included Greeks Leading Greek and Greek Excellence Awards. Greeks Leading Greeks allow all chapters to come together and listen to keynote speakers. The Greek Excellence Awards presents the top fraternity and sororities in categories such as Outstanding Campus Involvement, Outstanding Scholarship, and Greek Man/Woman of the year.

While many students were enjoying spring break fun in the sun, ASB members were underground in Saltpeter Cave in Tennessee, helping to pick up trash and clean up damage from vandalism. For the past few years, ASB has done hurricane relief work, but this year they decided to take a new direction. This year's trip had an environmental focus with projects like cleaning the cave and working on the Cumberland Trail. Says ASB executive member senior Forrest Heyman, "We wanted to think outside the box. We considered many possibilities, but this one best fit our needs."

1.The main project of the week was working on the Cumberland Trail. Advisor Jill Mattingly junior Amanda Rutherford and freshman Christy Hazuka use fire rakes to remove duff and prepare the trail for hikers.
2. Junior Chelsea Sher and sophomore Jennifer Liu enjoy ultimate frisbee during their free time. Fall Break may be short, but with 40 Butler students, a few days can make a big impact. Last October, 40 Butler students undefined to Neon, Kentucky for the 13th annual Fall Alternative Break service trip. The students split into several groups and worked to dig a ditch, clean up the remainder of a house after a fire, install insulation, and paint the outside of a house. Junior Katy Kaesebier, who will serve as FAB president in 2008, said the trip "gave us the opportunity to immerse ourselves in the local culture as well as form and strengthen friendships with other Butler students and trip advisors, and learn many things about ourselves."

For Blue Il's birthday on March 27, BUSF hosted an allcampus birthday party complete with free cupcakes, games, and Polaroid photos with the birthday dog. Freshman Nicole Ehlert mans the party table with advisor Jennie Jones and Dean Irene Stevens.

The mascot stretches before BUSF's annual Bulldog Jog Race in March. The race goes all around campus and raises money for several scholarships the group sponsors.

Part of BUSF's mission is connecting with future Butler students, so the group invited prospective students to attend a home men's basketball game and get the real Butler student experience. This was a new event for 2008, along with Blue ll's Birthday.

The executive board and three freshmen attended a conference with other student foundations in February at Michigan State University, home of Sparty. BUSF was named the Outstanding Organization in their district.

Sophomore Brian Zahn and freshman Kelsey Adams worked together to plant this tree on College Avenue. BUSF aims to "connect with students of the past, present and future." One way they achieve this is service projects that include the Young Alumni Board. The club completed two service projects this year, including planting trees for Keep Indianapolis Beautiful.

Largest student organization on campus sets new record in attendance

utler University is home to over 115 student organizations, each varying in membership size. The Dawg Pound is the largest organization on campus, boasting record numbers in attendance this school year with over 1300 members.

The staggering 1300 members participate in one of the student body's main roles: the vital support group for Butler athletics. A typical trademark for members are painted faces accompanied by the 2007-2008 tie-dyed shirt.

Beginning in 2001, the purpose of the Dawg Pound was to boost attendance and overall involement at Butler basketball games, a goal that was obviously achieved. Each year students who choose to participate in the organization pay a fee that helps pay for organization events. All Butler students receive free admission to all boys' and girls' basketball games, but Dawg Pound members earn exclusive rights to court-side seating.

Ty Anderson and Jeff Yambert support the boys' basketball team with wigs and painted faces and bodies.

According to a survey of BUMB members, the most popular band tradition is the fireman song that members sing in the stands at football games, supplemented by the colorguard's fireman hats. Freshman Adam Weaver says, "It's so innocent until the last word."

Freshman Jimmy Gilkey is one of three tenor drummers who wore crazy hats while playing in the stands. This tradition was passed down to the new drumline members.

For the last game of the year, drill formations such as this line-up were designed by senior members of the band. Seniors also chose the musical selections which included "The Incredibles."

At ine emint is season, three players were named to the 2007 All-: we. wi matall League Team: senior brothers Chris and Mike Marzutes, along with junior Jordan Quiroz.
When asked about being a team leader, Jordan says, "Becoming a team leader demands discipline, integrity, and honesty. This includes a good work ethic, always being on time, and admitting when you are wrong. People look up to me because I don't just talk about what I am going to do, I just do it. The statistics speak for themselves. So I believe that my actions speak louder than words."
This season was the last time team leaders and brothers Chris and Mike Marzotto will play football together. Mike says, "Playing with Chris made my experience much more enjoyable. Having the total trust of Chris allowed both of us to play harder and let it all out on the field." Chris adds, "Playing with Mike was one of the best experiences of my life because we had grown up together and we each knew how much time, work, and sacrifice we had put into our entire career. To play with him was a great honor and something I will cherish for the rest of my life."

At the end of my freshman year last spring, I was certainly not aspiring to be Editor-in-Chief of the yearbook. In fact, I wasnt even sure if I'd have time to fit yearbook into my schedule. However, when all the former editors graduated, I was left as the sole survivor. I was faced with a decision - I could take on the yearbook and do the best I could, or I could say no and there would be no book. I love being in college and I especially love Butler, and I think that we have so many great stories to tell about our experiences here. Not only do we want to cherish these stories in the years after graduation, but we need to pass on our stories to the next generation of Butler students. So, I said yes and the journey began.

I only have one year of yearbook experience from high school, but luckily my Naperville North High School yearbook partner-in-crime, Sean Brady, also attends Butler and agreed to help me out. We began the year as a staff of two people. Our recruitment slogan was "Join the Yearbook Revolution!" because we figured if we were going to do this, we might as well make it better. We started off with an enthusiastic staff of about twenty people and then we realized that changing this yearbook really would be a total revolution. With new online software, a new staff structure, a new advisor and a new relationship with our publisher, we had so much to learn. Some people weren't able to stick it out through the trials and changes and so we lost a lot of our staff members. However, I think we've finally figured it out and I am so proud of the core group of staff that made it to the very end. All but three of them were freshmen, and yet our little group of underclassmen has managed to publish an entire book.

We hope that you enjoy some of the changes we have made. To my knowledge, this is the first year that Butler has had an all-color yearbook. We also attempted to include organizations and stories that haven't been covered in the past, so that we could better reflect what life at Butler is really like. Lastly, we are trying a more professional look and journalistic style that we hope will make the book more fun to look at and read. We didn't accomplish everything we hoped, but this publication has come a long way. I am so excited to see what next year's staff can do with it.

To the staff: you guys are amazing! You have accomplished so much in your first year of college and your future potential is so great. Thank you for all of your hard work and for sticking with us even through the chaotic times, whether or not I bribed you with lollipops. Special thanks go out to Jon Riley and Jon Irons, our amazing photographers, who were always so willing to help me out. And thanks to the Collegian for helping us out with photo coverage when we couldn't get everything. We admire your photography and are so glad to include some of it here. Thank you also to Julie Pakenham, our advisor, and Mike Conlon from Jostens for supporting me throughout the year.

My friends, although indirectly involved, have also had a huge impact on this book. Thanks for being so helpful and not hating me when I continually harassed you for pictures, quotes or surveys. Without you all, I think about half of this book would be empty. I am especially grateful to Forrest Heyman and Kalin Clifford, who actually offered to help me with the book when they saw how stressed I was! Despite not being on staff, both of them put in hours of work. Thanks for being amazing friends. Lastly, but most lovingly, I must thank my roommates Katie Fodness and Jill Devine. Not only are they the two most amazing women I know, but they put up with my mess, kept me company on those late nights of working (okay, every night), and always made me laugh or offered to drive to Taco Bell when yearbook/life got too stressful.

In the end, this book is not perfect - but what in college ever is? All we can hope for is that we had fun doing it, met some cool people and maybe learned a little along the way. I have certainly enjoyed learning more about all of you who are featured in this book. I am glad that the yearbook can be one small tribute to all the amazing things Butler students accomplish and all the fun times we share. Please help out the 2009 staff by sharing your stories and photos with them so that we can do an even better job next year. As you read this book for the first time, I am studying abroad in Spain, but I can't wait to return home and see how amazing the next Drift will be.

Viva la revolucion!

Christina Lear
2008 Editor in Chief

Whether you're finishing your first year at Butler or wrapping up your college career, look back on your time here and think about the connections you've made. Think about your very first day at Butler and how many people have come into your life since then. Maybe you met an amazing professor who helped you figure out your dream career. Maybe you met your best friend, your first love, or the group of friends you'll still call in fifty years.

Even if the connections end here, hold on to this book and remember all the wonderful connections you had. Remember the smiles and the inside jokes, the meetings and the road trips, the late nights studying and the amazing weekends. Most importantly, don't forget - it's never too late to reconnect.
